Scavenger Hunts That Allow Students to Make a Choice extends the investigating process by encouraging students to "hunt" for items within their environment. Each scavenger hunt directs students to find four objects according to certain characteristics (e.g. something big, something that smells, something blue, etc.). Students locate objects and record their findings through writing and/or drawing. Scavenger hunts may be incorporated in: the prekindergarten classroom as a whole group activity, in the kindergarten/first grade classroom as a literacy center activity, independent morning activity, or as a challenge for more advanced students.

Our sincere hope is that these activities will be as fun and successful for your students as they have been for ours. We look forward to hearing the results of using these books in YOUR class.
